PRINTER TO THE UNIVERSITY

PREFACE

THIS work does not profess to be anything more learned than its title implies. During the present campaign in Somaliland, while raising and training some of the Somali levy companies, I have noted down all the commoner and most useful words and phrases that I found to occur during my interviews with the N. C. O.'s and men both on duty and off. These I have here presented in a continuous form, aiming at the most natural order in which a stranger would be able to pick them up, and at the same time observing what is more or less the ordinary grammatical sequence.

It is hoped that such a collection of conversational phrases and notes may be of use to subsequent travellers, and to civil and military officers in the country.

The excellent Grammar of Frs. Evangeliste and Cyprien has been of the utmost assistance ; in fact, without the benefit of their enormous labours, it would have been impossible for me in so short a time to transcribe the words and phrases as uttered by a Somali.

1086025

The greatest difficulty to contend with is the pronunciation ; and the Somali jungli is as yet so unaccustomed to Europeans and their modes of speech, and above all finds it so hard to believe that a European would try to talk his language, that, unless the pronunciation is very exact, he will practically refuse to try to understand one. In time, however, the Somalis will become accustomed to our attempts to master their difficult sounds, and in fact in trying to interview strangers I have been able to use my askaris as interpreters.

I had not intended to introduce any grammatical or syntactical paragraphs, but it seemed that the sentences alone were of such little use for building up others with different words, that some grammatical explanation was absolutely necessary. I have confined myself, however, to the most concise and general rules, leaving the exceptions for further study.

I have not attempted to introduce any but the Roman characters, though some sounds cannot really be represented by them. The cerebral ḍ, referred to by Frs. Evangeliste and Cyprien, is sometimes pronounced as d and sometimes like r, though never exactly like either. I have, however, used these letters so as to show in each word which of these two sounds tends to prevail.

Similarly the Arabic letter 'ghain' is very much exaggerated, and these exaggerated guttural aspirates I have tried to distinguish as ch (hardly a guttural), kh (sharp guttural sound), and gh (hard low guttural sound). The long-drawn aspirate seems to be best expressed phonetically by the double letter hh.

The tribes from whom I have picked up these phrases are chiefly the Habr Yunis, and Habr Toljaala from the Burao district. This may account for the different pronunciation of several words, as compared with what is given in the Grammar mentioned above, especially in the case of the diphthong ai. Where this occurs in the above Grammar I have found the syllable in more than half the cases to be pronounced as a short y, or as è, or ei.

I have not yet had time to compare the dialects of the Esa and Gadabursi tribes, or of the Dolbohanta or Ogaden, all of which will probably have considerable variations.

There will probably be many errors, as my interpreter speaks but indifferent English. It must be remembered, too, that many apparent irregularities will be due to colloquial contractions. But I can only say that every word and sentence here has been tested successfully by me in actual conversation.

GARRERO,

June 20, 1903.

ADDENDA	79

PART I.

ACCIDENCE.

1. The Alphabet.

a, pronounced like a in Scotch, 'man.'

ǎ, pronounced like a in 'cat.'

à, pronounced like a in 'father.'

b

d (in some words combines t, h, r). e, pronounced like e in 'pen.'

è, pronounced nearly as ai in 'pain.'

f g, always hard.

gh

h

hh, emphasized aspirate, almost a separate syllable.

i, pronounced as i in 'in.'

í, pronounced as e in 'eel.'

j

k

kh, hard aspirate.

ch, pronounced as ch in 'loch.'

l

ll, similar to Welsh ll.

m

n o, pronounced as o in 'on.'

ò, pronounced as o in 'own.'

oo, pronounced as o in 'ōhh.'

r, always rolled (in some words combines d, h, r).

s t

u, pronounced as u in 'full.'

ũ, pronounced as u in 'bun.'

ù, pronounced as oo in 'moon.'

w y

ai, pronounced as i in 'mine.'

ei, ey, pronounced as è, almost èi.

oi

ow, pronounced as ou in 'mouth.'

2. The Aspirates and Gutturals hh, gh, kh, ch must be learnt by ear, and are very exaggerated deep sounds, difficult to reproduce.

The letters d, r are in some words hardly distinguishable. In the same word the letter sometimes may sound like d, sometimes like r. It appears to be formed by trying to utter a d with the tongue on the roof of the mouth.

The acute accent ' is used to denote the accentuation only; the grave accent ` denotes a long full sound.

3. Interjections.

wárya! waría! war', attracts attention, and commences all conversation.

hoi! hoihoi! a shout to call a man.

-ow! same as last, added to a name.

nabat! Peace, a greeting.

'ss ka warren? How are you?

dèga! colloquial exclamation.

kòd, kòdi, waiye, yes, well? I see, &c.

howrarsan, all right.

wà run, quite right, certainly.

ha, yes.

maya, no.

dochso! be quick!

ghunyar! ayar! steady! slowly!

haiya! expression of encouragement.

wà mahai? what is it?

wà sidé? what's this? Hullo!

'ss kà eg! look out!

'ss ka dá, never mind.

ya? what?

wayo? why?

VERBS.

4. Verbal Particles.

The following particles qualify the meanings of verbs:—

si, before the verb, expresses motion away from the speaker.

so, before the verb, expresses motion towards the speaker.

'ss ka, iss ka, before the verb, is best translated by the exclamation 'there!'

Verbs ending in -si, -i are causative. Verbs ending in -so denote doing something for oneself.

i, me.

u, you, him, it.

In the following lists the 2nd pers. sing. imperative is given. To form the 2nd pers. plur. add a. In verbs ending in -o, -so the plural form ends in -da or -ta (§ 51).

ARTICLE, PRONOUNS, SUBSTANTIVES.

8. The Article must first be understood, since it is added to the noun, and in many cases alters the whole appearance and sound of the word.

9. The Indefinite Article does not exist, the noun alone being used instead, e. g.

jonía, a bag.

nín, a man.

Where the indefinite article occurs with an adjective, or alone, it is translated either by repeating the noun, or by mid, e. g.

mid kǎleh í si, give me another.

mid wèin ka ken, put a big one there.

kùrsi kaleh la kǎli, bring another chair.

10. The Definite Article is a suffix to the noun, and ends in either, -a, -i, or -u.

-a is used if what is spoken of is actually at hand, or in front of the speaker.

-i, -u are used when vagueness or absence is implied.

The commonest form is -i.

11. These suffixes are not used alone, but are linked to the noun by certain consonants, which vary according to gender and to the final letter of the word.

Such linking consonants are :—

Masculine.

-k-, after any consonants except g, k.

-g-, after g, k, i.

-h-, after aspirates and vowels except i.

Feminine.

-t-, after consonants except d.

-d-, after d, aspirates and vowels.

(Note—ld, lt become sh.)

12. Examples:—

nin, nin-ka, -ki, ku, the man.

busta, busta-ha, -hi, -hu, the blanket.

bíya, biya-ha, -hi, -hu, the water.

nàg, nag-ta, -ti, -tu, the woman.

míyi, miyi-ga, -gi, -gu, the jungle.

mel, mesha, meshi, meshu, the place.

tol, tol-ka, -ki, -ku, the tribe.

sandúch, sanduch-ha, -hi, -hu, the box.

warach, warach-da, -di, -du, the chit.

biyahu (biyu) la kali, bring the water.

biyaha ka ghad, take away the water.

bustahi? what about the blanket?

ninki mè? (§ 33), where is the man?

13. When the Definite Article is used independently, it requires one of the two following consonants:—

if masculine, k-.

if feminine, t-, e. g.

kí kaleh mé? where is the other?

ti wèin so glad, fetch the big one.

Plural:

kuér kaleh mé? where are the others?

14. The Demonstrative is similar to the definite article.

The suffixes are :

-an, this.

-as, -à, that.

These are the same for singular and plural.

The linking consonants are the same as those for the definite article, e. g.

dágah-has, that stone.

mis-kan, this table.

nâg-tâ, that woman.

To make it more emphatic, the demonstrative is often added to the noun with the definite article, e. g.

áchalkakán, this house here.

Or, the definite article may follow the demonstrative, but without the linking consonant, e. g.

nimankána, these men here.

nimankâsi, those men there.

15. The demonstrative may also be used independently with the consonants k, t.

In this use it has plural forms, e. g.

kuan, tuan, these.

kuas, tuas, those.

When this form carries with it any meaning of quantity, the noun in-ta is used (§ 30), e. g.

inta kaleh, the rest.

intas waiye, that's all.

intà damèya, finish that.

inta ka bádán la kàli, bring more than that (§ 68).

16. The Possessive Pronoun has forms so similar, and follows so closely the above rules, that it is given here.

The definite article must be added to the possessive, either with or without the linking consonant.

English.	Possessive.	Article. nin mahàbis, mahabís-ti, prisoners.

 kùrsi-gi, kurási-di, chairs.

Note that except in (i), (ii) and (vi, a) nouns change their gender in the plural.

The plural is not very commonly used, it only occurs when any emphasis is to be laid on the number. After numerals and other words of quantity the singular is used.

Sometimes in (iii) the masculine article is used; e. g. bustyalka.

ADJECTIVES, ADVERBS, PREPOSITIONS, CONJUNCTIONS.

25. Adjectives follow the noun they qualify. There are only a few pure adjectives, the remaining adjectival parts of speech being verbal past participles, formed by adding -an, -san to the verb root (cf. § 49).

The particle wa represents the verb 'is,' 'are,' e. g.

wanáji, make good.

wanáksan, good.

wa wanáksan, is good.

wa nin hun, he is a bad man.

Besides the particle wa, verbs expressing state are formed by conjugating adjectives as verbs, e. g.

wanáksana, wa wanáksana, is good (§ 54).

(wa) àsya, is red (§ 52).

(wa) houlyíra, is easy.

wa may be used or not, but usually occurs.

For Comparison vide § 68.

Adverbs are formed by the particle si or by ghun, e. g.

si wanáksan, well.

ghunyar, slowly.

26. List of Adjectives.

wein, large.	safaisan, adaisan,
yàr, yír, small.	clean.
dèr, long, tall, deep.	uskágleh, dirty.
gában, short.	bùha, full.
ádag, hard, strong.	marán, empty.
balàran, thick.	affèyan, sharp.
jilisan, thin, soft, weak.	afbèlan, blunt.
dùban, long and thin.	sàhalan, houlyír, easy.
ùlus, heavy.	kulul, kululan, warm.
fúdud, light.	ghabòban, cold.
wanáksan, good.	àd, bright, white.
hun, bad.	às, red, brown.
àjis, lazy.	oul, yellow, green.

27. Numerals precede the noun they qualify, and do not require the plural. The definite article is usually attached to the numeral, and not the noun.

36. The Prepositions, ka, from,

ku, to,

la, with,

are used to qualify, not the noun, which has no declension, but the verb. They always immediately precede the verb, e. g.

^{he} Bohòtle bu ká yimi, he came from Bohotle.

^{he} Bohòtle yu-gu tégya, he is going to Bohotle.

^I anigu sirkálki la raa, I go along with the officer.

PART II.

SYNTAX.

37. General Rules.

The order of a Somali sentence is (1) Subject, (2) Object, (3) Verb.

Adverbial clauses, especially expressions of Time, come first.

If the subject of an adverbial or conditional clause is the subject of the principal sentence, it is placed first, i. e. in front of the conjunction.

The verb always requires the simplest form of the personal pronoun to immediately precede it, whether the true subject is expressed or not.

Complicated sentences are entirely avoided, a string of short remarks describing events in their proper order being employed instead.

Any further rules than these must be left here to be gathered from the examples.

PRONOUNS.

38. Simple Form.

	Subjective.	Objective.
I	-an	i
thou	-ad	u, ku
he	-u	u, ku
she	-ei, -ai	u, ku
we	-einu, -ainu	na
you	-eidin, -aidin	idin
they	-ei, -ai	u, ku.

In the above the subjective cases cannot be used by themselves, but must be attached to the preceding noun, conjunction, interrogative or negative particle.

39. Prefixes.

Unless the subjective cases are attached as described in § 38, they are used with certain prefixes :

w- (e. g. wan, wad, wu), only used when first in the sentence.

b- (e. g. ban, bad, bu). The commonest form.

y- (e. g. yan, yad, yu), used for euphony instead of b.

The objective cases require no prefixes.

40. Demonstrative.

With the subjective case of this form, the simple form is required in addition, preceding the verb.

ànigu, ánigá, I.

àdigu, ádigá, thou.

ísagu, isága, he.

íyadu, iyáda, she.

ánnagu, innagu, annága, innága, we.

èdinku, ídinku, edínka, idínka, you.

íyagu, iyága, they:

41. Imperative.

an, 1st person.

ha, 3rd person.

Used with the conditional tense. (For the 2nd person vide § 46.)

42. Indicative.

This form is used with certain verbs, such as want, hope, think, say, &c., when it may be translated by 'this is what I,' &c.

wahán, this is what I . . .

wahád, this is what thou . . .

wuhú, this is what he . . .

wehé, this is what she . . .

wehènu, this is what we . . .

wehèdin, this is what you . . .

wehè, this is what they . . .

43. Interrogative.

ya? ke? te? who? what?

kùma? tuma? which? (sing.).

kùama? tuama? which? (plur.).

ya? is the subjective case only.

When 'what' is the object of the verb, it is declined similarly to the indicative form.

mahán? what I . . .?

mahád? what thou . . .?

muhu? what he . . .?

mehé? what she . . .?

mehènu? what we . . .?

mehèdin? what you . . .?

mehé? what they . . .? (cf. § 59).

ya? also is the interjection, what? eh?

44. Examples.

wahán iri, berrito ban tegya, I said, I am going to-morrow.

muhu i shegé? what did he tell me?

wuhu dònya, this is what he wants.

ànigu máha, it is not I.

mahád dònisa? what do you want?

ninki wa joga. ke? The man is here.

Who?

nin Dolbohanta. kuma? a Dolbohanta.

Which one?

CONJUGATION OF VERBS.

45. Elisions and Contractions.

(i) In monosyllabic verbs, in the infinitive a becomes e.

(ii) In polysyllabic verbs, where the last syllable is short, the vowel of the last syllable is dropped in conjugating.

(iii) lt, ld become sh.

(iv) rd, rg become rt, rk.

(v) rn, ln become rr, ll.

46. The Root. The simplest form of a verb is the 2nd pers. sing. imperative. This is the root from which all tenses are formed.

47. Classes. There are three classes.

I. The root ends in a consonant, or -a, or -ah, e.g.

dŭb, roast.

shég, tell.

tag, go.

arag, see.

raa, follow.

ka, rise.

II. The root ends in -o, e.g.

jogso, stop.

soð, go on.

nocho, go back.

garo, understand.

baro, learn.

III. The root ends in -è, -i, -ei, -ai, e.g.

shachèi, work.

somèi, make.

haï, have.

ibi, sell.

si, give.

48. The Infinitive is formed—in I by adding -i to the root, e.g.

dǔbi, shegi, tegi, arki, keï.

in II, III, by adding -n to the root, e.g.

jogson, soòn, nochon, garan, baran, sha-chein, sin.

49. The Participle, or verbal adjective, is formed by adding to the root,

I. -an.

III. -san, e.g.

dǔban, roasted.

adeisan, cleaned.

kululan, warmed.

gogoisan, cut up.

dalolisan, perforated.

50. Moods and Tenses.

There are two Moods, Perfect and Imperfect, e.g.

I say, I said, I have said, are Perfect.

I am saying, I was saying, are Imperfect.

These are distinguished by the form of the tense inflexions.

There are only three pure Tenses—

Present ends in -a.

Past ends in -é.

Conditional ends in -o.

51. Perfect Mood. Tenses are formed by adding the tense terminations directly to the root, except in II, in which class the terminations are -da, -dé, -do.

In the second class where the final o is short it is usually dropped, and the letters altered if necessary according to the rules in § 45, e.g.

wan shega, I tell. wan shége, I told.

gortan shego, when I tell.

soo, go on.

wan sooda, I go on.

jogso, wait.

wan jogsoda, I wait.

garo, understand.

wan garta, I understand.

baro, learn.

wan barta, I learn.

yelo, undertake.

wan yesha, I undertake.

nocho, go back.

wan nochda, I go back.

52. Imperfect Mood.

The tense terminations are preceded by i or y, and added to the infinitive.

(In I the i of the infinitive is dropped.)

(These seem to be the tenses of an imperfect auxiliary verb i, be, conjugated regularly and with the dependent verb in the infinitive preceding it, cf. § 58), e.g.

wan soǒnya, I am going on.

wan shachèinya, I am working.

wan shégya, I am telling.

wan malènyé, I was thinking.

The i is short in all except those verbs of II where the syllable preceding it is short; e.g.

garǎnyá,

barǎnyá,

ghobǒnyá.

53. Table of Moods.

Cl.	Imperative.	Infinitive.	Pres. Perf.	Pres. Imperf.
I.	shég, tell.	shégi.	shéga.	shégya.
II a.	soò, go on.	soòn.	soòda.	soònya.
b.	baro, learn.	báran.	barta.	baranýa.
III.	shachèi, work.	shachèin.	shachèya.	shachèinya.

54. The above terminations are for 1st pers. and 3rd pers. sing. masc. The following are the varieties for person :—

	Present.	Past.	Conditional. sing. 1	-a	-é	-o
2	{ -ta -sa	{ -té -sé	{ -to -so
3 m.	-a	-é	-o
3 f.	{ -ta -sa	{ -té -sé	{ -to -so
plur. 1	-na	-né	-no
2	{ -tan -san	{ -tén -sén	{ -tan -san
3 m.	-an	-én	-an
3 f.	{ -tan -san	{ -tén -sén	{ -tan -san

In the 2nd and 3rd fem. pers. sing. and plur., t is used after a consonant, i.e. in the perfect tenses of I and II.

s is used always after i, i.e. in all imperfect tenses, and in perfect tenses of III.

55. The Future is formed by the present perfect of the auxiliary verb don, will.

The auxiliary is often omitted in this tense and the infinitive used alone, e.g.

wan shegi dona } I will tell.
wan shegi }

56. Table of Conjugations.Imperative.

- (I) an shego, let me tell.
 sheg, tell.
- (I) ha machlo, let him hear.
 ha machasho, let her hear.
- (III) an shacheino, let us work.
 shacheya, work ye.
- (II) ha bartan, let them learn.

Future.

wan tegi dona	} I will go, &c.
„ donta
„ dona „ donta
„ donna
„ dontan
„ donan

Perfect.Imperfect.

Present.

soòda, go on.	(II. a.) soònya, am going on.
soòta	soònisa
soòda	soònya
soòta	soònisa
garna, understand.	(II. b.) baranína, are learning.
gartan	baranísan
gartan	baranýan

Perfect.	Imperfect.
Past.
tagé, went.	(I.) tégyé, was going.
takté	tégisé
tagé	tégyé
takté	tégisé
arkné, saw.	(I.) machliné, were hearing.
arktén	machlisén
arkén	machlyén
Conditional.
falo, do.	(I.) félyo, may do.
fasho	féliso
falo	félyo
fasho	féliso
shachèino, work.	(III.) shachèinino, may work.
shachèisan	shachèinisan
shachèyan	shachèinyan

57. Negative. The negative particle is ma, an, or ha.

Their use is as follows:—

Imperative.

ha, with the infinitive with -in added, e. g.

hádal, talk.

ha hádlin, don't talk.

(plur.) ha hádlinina, don't talk.

Perfect Mood.

Present tense.

ma, with the present perfect tense, e. g.

má joga, he is not here.

Past tense.

ma, with the infinitive with -n added, e.g.
midna maàrkin, I saw no one.

Conditional tense.

an, with the infinitive with -in added, e.g.
hádanad ghóbonin, if you do not do.
hádanu jògin, if he is not here.

58. Imperfect Mood.Present and Past tenses.

The infinitive is used followed by the tense terminations, which are negated as explained above (§ 57). (Cf. note in § 52.)

Thus the i again appears as an auxiliary verb, and in this case, in negative form, as a separate word and not combined with the verb itself; e.g.

doni màya, I am not wanting.

garan màya, I do not understand.

tegi màin, I was not going.

The present tense form is conjugated without personal pronouns.

Present tense—

doni maya

„ maisa

„ maya

„ maisa

„ mayna

„ maisán

„ mayan

} I do not want, or,
 } I shall not want,
 } &c.

In the past tense the negative form for perfect tenses, being the infinitive, with ma and n, is not conjugated either in this or in the perfect tenses.

The negative of the future tense is the same as the negative present imperfect.

Conditional tense. In this also the i may be said to be conjugated regularly, but is not treated as a separate word.

Thus the root i makes infinitive in and negative conditional an inin (§ 57), e.g.

hadanad ghoboninin, if you shall not do.

Note.—The negative of wa is maha. (Cf. § 25.)

59. The Interrogative.

The interrogative particle is ma, e.g.

ma dónisa ? do you want it ?

ma jóga ? is he here ?

ma arkten ? did you see ?

ma is combined with the personal pronouns, e.g.

maan, mian, maad, miad, miu, miad arkté ?
did you see ?

After interrogative adverbs or pronouns the particle ma is not required.

(For such interrogative parts of speech vide §§ 29, 33, 43), e.g.

ya kaléh jira? what else is there?

intè jirta? how far is it?

The interrogative 'why?' is translated by mahan u, mahad u, &c. (Cf. §§ 43, 64.)

In negative interrogative sentences the ma retains the interrogative sense, and an is used as the negative particle, e.g.

mianad donisa? do you not want?

The particle sò, shò, expresses doubt or potentiality, e.g.

sò àno miad dónisa? perhaps you want milk? or, don't you want milk?

shò máha? is it not?

60. The Passive.

(i) This may be expressed as in English by wa, is, are, and the participle (§§ 25, 49), e.g.

wa adèsan, it is cleaned.

(ii) The commoner way of expressing the passive is by the use of the particle la.

This then has the same meaning as the French on in on dit, 'it is said.'

The passive subject is in the objective case and the verb is in the 3rd pers. masc. singular, as if la were the subject, e.g.

la kénya, it is being brought ; it is coming.
isága ma la sín, he has not been given, or,
 no one gave him.

ímisa la dónya ? how many are wanted ?

Note : la u becomes lo.

la ku ,, lagu.

e.g. sirákíshi kaleh biyu lo gèiya, the other officers are being brought their water.

wa lagu dulmya, he is being ill-treated.

61. Auxiliary Verbs.

don, will.

kar, be able, can.

jir, be (used in past tense to form a past habitual tense).

These are conjugated regularly, and take the infinitive, which precedes them ; e.g.

wan tégi dona, I will go.

wad tégi kari dóna, you will be able to go.

wu soòn kari màya, he cannot walk.

wan olli jiré, I used to live.

62. Irregular Verbs.

The principal ones are :—

Imper.	Inf.	Pres.Perf.	Pres.Imperf.
imo , come.	iman.	ímada.	imánya.
deh , say.	oran.	iràda.	oránya.
oll , live.	olli.	al.	(ollya).
ogho , know.	oghon.	oghda.	oghaha.

In these four verbs the imperfect tenses are conjugated regularly, but in the perfect tenses the specific consonants for the different persons are added to the beginning, instead of to the termination.

The past perfects are also irregular :

imi, came.	iri, said
il, lived.	oghàdé, knew.

The conditional of imo is imàdo.

wan imi, came.	iràda, say.
wad timi.	tiràda.
wu yimi.	yiràda.
wènu nimi.	niràna.

The only other irregular verbs to be mentioned here are the doubtful verbs :

leh	{	have	lahan	lehda	{	laha
		ought				lehya should
weh	{	have not			{	wehya wei cannot				wahya
(-i	be	-in				-ia, -yaha).

(§§ 25, 52, 58.)

63. Examples of Irregular Verbs.

wahan lehya, I have, &c.

inad takto yad lehda, you have got to go.

inad egto yad lehda, you must have seen.

'twenty' deh, say 'twenty.'
 dochso deh, tell him to hurry.
 anigà leh, it is mine.
 yà leh? whose?

laagti ban ku sín laha, I should give you the pay. (Cf. § 70.)

64. Weh. This is a defective irregular negative verb. It is employed as an auxiliary and consequently takes the infinitive. Its meaning is rather a surprised or unexpected negative, or refusal, or impossibility.

It is especially used after 'why not?' 'why didn't?' (cf. § 59), e. g.

mahád u yéli wèhdi? why didn't you do it?
 mahád u dònì wèhda? why don't you look for it?

mahad i gu shegweï? why didn't you tell me?
 weï, wàhyi, I couldn't find him.

leh wah, la wah, he is lost.

biyu meshà bènu ku wehna, we cannot find water at that place.

NOTES.

(1) -ti the 2nd sing., t prefixed, of the verb -i, be.

(2) The negative words wachaba and midna require the negative particle as well.

(3) This verb almost always is used with u.

(4) The present imperfect tense has a sense of futurity, intention, or willingness.

(5) bati for bad ti, see (1).

(6) iminkan for iminka an.

(7) haïso, have got.

Present Perfect Tense.

wan haïsta.

wènu haïsona.

wad haïsta.

wèdin haïsatàn.

wu haïsta.

wè haïstan.

wè haïsta.

(8) Verbs of this class seem to be very irregular in dropping the o, and in the length of it.

(9) i, for me.

(10) jirta, fem. referring to mesha, the place.

(11) gèdi, one camel's march.

(12) laba lugodleh, on both feet; compare also bulli harédleh, rain-water bulli; (mel) derkènleh, place of euphorbia trees; and anigà leh, it is mine.

(13) ke, an interrogative form of the definite article; cf. interrogative pronoun ke? who?

(14) dameian for an dameiè.

(15) There is no true relative pronoun, it is usually omitted, or represented by the definite article.

(16) Literally, 'what one told you.' wehé is the plural, and is object of yiri.

(17) sidan, sidi an.

(18) so gives the meaning of 'bringing' the complaint; ka would imply 'taking' it.

(19) mahai behaves as an auxiliary verb.

(20) o is thus used meaning 'because.'

(21) la mel nochodé, 'take part with.'

(22) ghobto is conditional tense, as always after such conjunctions, unless the time is a definite past.

(23) = 'bring me water that I may drink.'

(24) The subject of comparison is the subject of the sentence and therefore placed first. Where the subject of comparison is the object of the sentence, it follows the noun it is compared with.

(25) fududyihi. This form of adjectival verb gives the superlative sense of 'very.'

(26) sa, another form of expressing the superlative, but means 'most.'

(27) waiyi, 'cannot be found.'

(28) When there is any intention or uncertainty implied, in with conditional tense is used. In direct narrative, the original oratio recta is repeated.

(29) Here la is evidently used exactly as any personal pronoun, and attached to the conjunction (cf. § 60).

(30) There is at present some vagueness about the correct forms for the various types of conditional sentence. These examples are therefore very deficient.

(31) maydin for ma aidin.

(32) laha makes a conditional tense, and is used as an auxiliary verb.

(33) an donya, 'which I want.'

hadiad . . . anad, more correctly would be in one word, hadanad.

(34) wachaba weidinina [cf. note (2)].

Here the negative particle ha is omitted, but the verb is put in negative form.

(35) A verb badso, increase.

(36) dulmya for dulunya, n before a vowel usually becomes m. iss yirado, literally, 'say to oneself.'

ADDENDA

(These additional notes arrived from Somaliland too late to be incorporated in the text.)

§ 5.

dàf, descend, go down.

kor, climb, go up.

alamadi, mark, make a mark on.

bedel, change.

bel, lose.

waràbi, give to drink, water.

dàji, graze, take to graze.

dakh, graze (intrans.).

ingeji, dry (trans.).

maïr, wash (with water).

maïro, be washed.

liss, milk (trans.).

nasi, rest, give rest to.

tab, touch, meddle with.

tòl, sew.

dufo (dufta), blow (a whistle, bugle).

§ 7.

ku nocho, repeat, say again.

§ 10.

The following fine distinction seems to be made between i and u :—

u is employed for persons and things well known, and about which there can be no doubt. It would not be used when any epithet qualifies the noun.

i is employed in a perfectly vague and indefinite sense. Thus—sirkalka would refer to an officer actually present.

sirkalki would refer to any officer whatever, not present.

sirkalku would refer to the man's own immediate officer, or company commander.

u is thus used frequently for common and well-known objects, as, biyahu, chorahhdu, naguhu, and in the personal pronouns, anigu, adigu.

§ 17.

- barmil-shi, barrel.
 kibrid-di, match.
 llòhh-hi, wood (box wood).
 masaf-ki, funnel.
 saman-ki, goods (general term).
 shama-hi, candle.

- dàsad-di, any tin pot, can.
 gudimo-di, native axe, small blade on a forked stick.
 hongol-ki, hooked stick, for dragging in branches for the zareba; entrance to an enclosure.

§ 19.

- bilad-di, country, land.
 daü-gi, road.
 bèr-ti, dried-up dung, grass, &c.

§ 21.

- ghodah-hi, general name for thorn trees.
 damèl-ki, a thorn tree with small hard pods, like French beans, eaten by Somalis.

§ 25.

All simple adjectives observe the following very general rules of inflexion:—

When qualifying a noun with the def. art., add a.

When qualifying a plural noun, reduplicate the first syllable.

Both inflexions take place concurrently, e. g.
 ninki wanaksana dagahhanta yaryara.
 dagahha wanaksana dagahhan balbalaran.
 dagahhan yaryar.

§ 26.

baan, bad-tempered.

dab, true.

fian, good, smart, clever.

§ 54.

In § 24 it is noticed that most polysyllabic nouns change their gender in the plural. If the plural form is masc., the masc. form of the verb is used, and vice versa, irrespectively of the natural gender of the noun; e. g.

ninki wa imanya, the man is coming.

nimanki wa imanyan, the men are coming.

askarigi wa wanaksenyihi, the soldier is good.

askarti wa wanaksentahain, the soldiers are good.

nagti wa imanisa, the woman is coming.

naguhu wa imanyan, the women are coming.

dagahha wa hunyihî, the stone is bad.

dagahhanta wa huntahain, the stones are bad.

aurti takten, the camels went.

§ 71.

alan-ki, flag.

bedel, relieve, change.

markhad-di, witness.

A close-up photograph of a brown leather boot, oriented vertically. The boot features a prominent vertical seam down the center of the shaft and a curved toe patch. A small, light-colored mark is visible on the side of the shaft. In the bottom right corner, a portion of a bright green rectangular label is visible, containing the text "STA" in bold black letters.
