

THE PRIVATE LIFE OF A NATION IN CRISIS

A study on the politics in/of Greek television fiction

Georgia Aitaki

fil.mag

Avhandlingen baseras på följande delstudier:

"All good people have debts": Framing the Greek crisis in television fiction.
Originally published in Crisis and the Media, edited by Marianna Patrona, Amsterdam: John Benjamins, pp. 107-126, 2018.

Domesticating pathogenies, evaluating change: The Eurozone crisis as a 'hot moment' in Greek television fiction. Originally published in Media, Culture & Society, Volume 40, Issue 7, pp. 957-972, 2018.
DOI: 10.1177/0163443717734403

Laughing with/at the national self: Greek television satire and the politics of self-disparagement. Originally published in Social Semiotics, Online First, 2017. DOI: 10.1080/10350330.2017.1408893

Making TV fiction in a commercial context: The case of Greek private television. Revised and resubmitted.

Authorship potentialities in Greek television fiction: The social dramas of Manousos Manousakis. Submitted for initial review.

Akademisk avhandling för avläggande av filosofie doktorsexamen i journalistik, medier och kommunikation, som med tillstånd av Samhällsvetenskapliga fakulteten vid Göteborgs universitet framläggs för offentlig granskning, fredagen den 16 november, 2018, kl 13.15 i Arendalsseminariet, sal SA420.

Institutionen för journalistik, medier och kommunikation, JMG, Seminariegatan 1A, Göteborg.

UNIVERSITY OF GOTHENBURG
DEPT OF JOURNALISM, MEDIA AND COMMUNICATION

THE PRIVATE LIFE OF A NATION IN CRISIS

A study on the politics in/of Greek television fiction

English text, with a summary in Swedish, 160 pages

ISBN: 978-91-88212-75-7 (PRINT)

ISBN: 978-91-88212-77-1 (PDF)

ISSN: 1101-4652

Available for download at: <http://hdl.handle.net/2077/57721>

Georgia Aitaki (georgia.aitaki@jmg.gu.se)

Department of Journalism, Media and Communication, University of Gothenburg
PO Box 710, SE-405 30 Göteborg

Doctoral dissertation presented at the Department of Journalism, Media and Communication (JMG), 2018

University of Gothenburg, Sweden

Abstract

The private life of a nation in crisis offers in-depth studies of the fictional reconstruction and negotiation of moments of heightened societal tension that take place throughout the life of a nation. Its constituent papers focus on the role of television fiction in representing and shaping either critical moments, events, or periods that disrupt the normal pace of life, or unresolved societal tensions that become part of everyday life. What is more, the papers investigate the socio-cultural consequences of representations, in terms of the interpretative lenses television fiction provides for understanding the events as such. The empirical focus is placed on television fiction produced and broadcast in Greece, a country that has recently received a large share of publicity because of its protagonistic role in the late 2000s Eurozone crisis and, at the same time, a media landscape with multiple aspects that still remain uncharted.

The thesis contains case studies from different periods of Greek television fiction, from 1989 – the year of the launch of the first private channels in Greece – onwards, in an attempt to connect the overall project to the production context characterizing commercial television, another aspect of European television in the process of continuous exploration. Through a close analysis of specific television programmes, as well as a complementary study of the production culture of private television in Greece, this thesis aspires to contribute to the general question regarding the role of the media in critical, uncertain, or tumultuous times, with an emphasis on television fiction's potential to recode their meaning and to reflect back on society.

Keywords

Politics, television fiction, private television, critical times, Greece